HILO'S FIRST TRAIN NORTH

B. F. Dillingham Takes an Excursion to Honolulu Gulch.

News was received by wireless from Hilo yesterday of the running of the first passenger train from Hilo across the Waialua River in the direction of Hamakua, over the recently laid tracks. The tracks are laid as far as Honolulu Gulch, about two miles out of Hilo. Starting from the Hilo station, the road crosses a new bridge over the Waialua River, and runs through a very picturesque bit of country, above the shore, to Honolulu Gulch, where a much larger bridge is being constructed.

B. F. Dillingham, head of the railway company, went to Hilo on the Wilhelmina, and the excursion of passengers was arranged while he was there. Many prominent citizens of Hilo took the short trip, and Hilo is full of enthusiasm over the possibilities of the new railroad line.

At Honolulu Gulch, where the track now terminates, the railroad company is constructing the largest railroad bridge in the Territory.

TRY MAUKA, MAKAI, EWA AND WAIKIKI

SAN FRANCISCO, May 2.—There is to be no more north, south, east and west!

No more "boxing of the compass" by sailors and the children in school!

This is all to be done away with, according to Prof. Alexander G. McAuley, the distinguished head of the United States weather bureau in this city. Professor McAuley made the suggestion a couple of years ago, and it has been adopted in England and Germany and is to be adopted here.

The new plan is to have direction indicated by degrees. This affords a natural, easy, geometrical division of the compass. It will make the language of direction a universal one to mariners of all nations, will help sailors to avoid mistakes, and incidentally will make life a little easier for the boys in school. North on the new compass will be zero. There being 360 degrees in a circle, the rhumb lines may be as numerous as desired. To steer east the sailor will hold his course away toward ninety degrees. Northeast will be forty-five degrees.

All the terms of direction in sea stories will have to be changed. The treasure hunter will no longer start south. He must "shape his course" for 180 degrees. The pirate may no more

"turn his long, low, rakish craft" to the west and "send before the wind." He will have to point for 270 degrees.

JAMES AKO IS NOW COURT CLERK

Thomas Aiu of Kailua, Hawaii, having resigned as clerk of the circuit court of the third circuit, under the jurisdiction of Hon. J. A. Matthewsman, the position has been offered to and accepted by James Ako of the same place, who will assume his new duties on the first of next month, when Mr. Ako's present position as deputy assessor of the district will become vacant.

It will be remembered some little time back, that the Territorial auditor, took a hurried trip to Kona in answer to a wireless message from some official on the island. Upon reaching Kona the auditor examined the accounts of the clerk but, so the report went, found no shortage. The report also stated that the incumbent was a poor accountant and that it was more a matter for the judge to act, whether to retain his services or get a new man. Judge Matthewsman was then on the mainland and since his return, the probability is that there has been some correspondence between him and the auditor's office. At any rate the change of clerkship that was then mooted has come about by Mr. Aiu being allowed to resign.

The position carries $100 a month. The amount of bond for the office is $2500.
